HALUCINATION

It is a well-known (fact) that textual (novelistic) operations of reading are rarely hallucinogenic or based on chance. Those that are rare or vaguely indeterminate and hence only intermittently pleasurable. Those that are not are considered mawkish or experimental. These (rotating) intervals or surrounds of reading matter can be taken (imitatio) "of the lifestyles."